This is our first public release, and we've received a lot of great feedback. With the upcoming countdown to the completion of the AI Tech Tree, it seemed like a good time to share more about the new features and improvements. Since this is a big release, we have a few things to share. New Features Like with our previous releases, this release includes quite a few new features. Here's a short list: A new map. You can now explore the map and find out more about Org-13. We're always adding things to the map, but the new stuff is always a surprise. There are now trainable player carriers that can be used to train the 'Assault' ability. You can also carry components, which will help you modify and improve your units. By helping to develop new technologies, you can unlock cool new effects that will add more diversity to gameplay, like the new dynamic map. You can now explore the map and find out more about Org-13. Every component has a resource that can be used to modify a unit. Resource components can be earned by playing, using materials, and at the end of each round of combat, you can get rid of them. If you upgrade a unit, you will end up discarding some components. This gives you a chance to choose which components you
